Excerpt: . . . revision for 3 years, in part, due to a lack of consensus on integrating new technologies, including ADL, with traditional training approaches. Funding and budgeting issues similar to those we reported for DODs Financial 18 distance learning programs in 1997 remain unresolved. Funding allocations of more than 431 million for fiscal years 1999 through 2002 ( less than 1. 3 percent of its training budget during that period ) did not always meet program requirements, which were difficult to determine for a new program where standards were evolving and the technology changing rapidly. It is not likely that planned funding levels will meet future expected requirements. DOD program officials project that over 2. 2 billion will be needed for ADL programs through fiscal year 2007 but currently have programmed about 1. 6 billion a more than 600 million funding gap. Furthermore, according to DOD program officials, in some cases, anticipated training savings attributable to ADL implementation were removed from the budget as savings before they were realized. According to service officials, some training facility commanders continue to be concerned that ADL will reduce their resources because of the decrease in the number of students receiving traditional schoolhouse training. Finally, the Joint Staff and the services are still considering how to budget for the long-term use of ADL. ( See briefing section IV. ) The Deputy Under Secretary of Defense ( Readiness ) provided written Agency Comments comments on a draft of this report, which are reprinted in their entirety in appendix III. In its comments, DOD concurred with the...
