Excerpt: . sheet exhibits a portrait of King Charles. It briefly sets forth the nature and reasons of the grant. and loosely describes the boundaries of the province. This document, not yet two centuries old. is regarded in America with veneration. Four weeks after Charles had signed his patent, Penn sent out his cousin. Colonel William Markham. with his orders to take possession of the country. to inform the natives of his coming over, and assure them of his friendly feeling; to select a piece of land near Trenton Falls on which to build a house. and settle with Lord Baltimore the question of their frontier lines. The grant of his petition was a great event for Penn. Penn knew the grandeur arid the purity of his design. If Sydney felt that the cause of freedom was at issue, Penn believed that the experiment involved...
