In other cases it might be expedient for two or more churches to unite under the care of one minister. This plan would require an efficient eldership; for the people ought to meet on their vacant Sabbaths, to keep their Sunday schools in operation, and to unite in social worship; and surely an eldership competent for this purpose THE GOSPEL MINISTRY. 191 might be found; and the people might expect more benefit, from the labors of a man, whom they would have less frequently, but whose heart was in the work, than from the more frequent services of one, whose heart was chilled by the labor and cares of the world. I will observe, in the next place, that a system of well regulated economy must be adopted by Christians, before the church can perform its duty. If the love of fashion and show be indulged, it will waste the resources of the most prosperous communities, and leave nothing for the service of God; but under a system of decent and prudent retrenchment, the church may prosper in temporal things, and perform its religious duty at the same time. The Jews must have regarded their expenditures carefully, when they gave more than twenty per cent. of their income to the service of religion; and yet when they lived in conformity with this law, they were the most prosperous people in the world. What retrenchments could be made, most consistently...
