She gave me some beautiful jumbles and a cranberry tart; then I got a banana and an orange off the sideboard--just what I would eat for dessert if I were there to dinner, and I carried them all out to the arbor. I thought I would better put on my thickest coat and cap, because it wasn't so very warm. I put the dolls up on one seat, in a row, and gave them some bits of jumble to keep them quiet, while I sewed on my handkerchief. It was very pleasant there, because the sun shone in so bright, and the wind didn't blow much that day. When I had almost finished the handkerchief, I was hungry, and I ate all my luncheon. Then the sun made me shut my eyes, and I suppose I went to sleep; for the next thing I knew, I was lying on the seat, near which were papa and mamma, looking at me. Why, Chessie, child, what are you doing out here? said mamma. When I told them how I was keeping Arbor Day, they laughed; but mamma cuddled me up in her arms, and hurried me off into the house, because she was afraid I had taken cold. It was the middle of the afternoon, and I had been asleep...
