Excerpt: . the affections of my fellow citizens, crushing all my best hopes, and depriving me of the happiness of doing good, and of the inestimable advantages of independence. CHAP. VII. Agathon is banijted from Athens. / T H E period of my history I am M now arrived at, revives such painful reflections, that I may well be excused from dwelling any longer upon it than is necessary for my own justisication. It is possible, that some of my enemies might be influenced to combine against me from motives of republican zeal, and might have thought they should render as important a service to their country by contributing to my overthrow, as Hartnodius and Ariflogiton fancied they did in aflaslinating the sons of Pifistratus. Bur, in in general, it is certain that those, who most obstinately sought my ruin, were actuated by no other...
